WOMAN'S WORLD.

A REGIMEN FOR ROSELEAF TO OB-SERVE DURING THE WINTER.

and Marriago - A Woman's Building Women In Iceland-Belts and Colle

This is the season when the complex-ion specialist smiles happily in anticipa-tion of a golden harvest later on. This is the season when breakfast griddle cakes and dainty bits of sausage begin to appeal more to Miss Roseleaf than grapes and catmeal, and bot rolls and smoking muffins seduce her heart from she does not like to venture forth into the wind, but sits near the register in-stead and lets the coal gas begin its deadly work on her skin. This is the season when she stays up late o' nights and lies abed late o' mornings, when her cold sponge does not seem inviting, and when she opens her bedroom win-dow just a crack before she goes to sleep. All of which means that Miss Roseleaf will be Miss Sere-and-yellow-leaf if she continues in her reckless the bed and a screen at its foot to pre-vent a draft will render the course a perfectly safe one. Oxygen is even more potent than cold cream to bring the lily and the rose to their proper places. Then she must not abandon that cold sponge each morning. It is something with which no young woman can toy. She cannot stop taking it for a week and then resume, unless she wants to leave the world gracefully in an attack of pneumonia. But by taking it religiously every morning and rubbing down after it she can send the blood dancing through her veins, snap her fingers at the cold and make her skin hard, firm and healthy.

Occasionally Roseleaf may indulge in hot bread, cakes and sausage, but generally she had better cling to grains and fruit. On the days when the fleshpots of Egypt tempt her and she falls a vic-tim to her fondness for fried things, she should indulge in a double amount of

Every day, rain, snow, dust, hail or sunshine, Roseleaf must go forth and cultivate her complexion in the open She need not also cultivate chapped lips and cheeks, though, but may wear a thin, spotless veil.

At night the oatmeal bag should come washed thoroughly in hot water with soap or oatmeal. Then it should be rinsed in hot water in which benzoin has Then she should dry her Viscountess Emlyn, the Dowager Lady Kensington, the face and throat gently, dip her fingers into cold cream and begin a gentle massage. Her forehead should be firmly rubbed with the tips of her fingers. The mark should be stroked up and down. The place where laughter leaves its mark in wrinkles about the mouth should be rubbed up and down with the thumb. The lines beneath the eyes and the crowsfeet should be stroked from the nose outward very gently and very firmly. Then her chin and throat should be massaged back and forth, up and down, until she knows that not a telltale crease can remain. After which Roseleaf may say her prayers and go to sleep happy in the consciousness that she has done what she could for her com-plexion.—New York World.

At a recent meeting of a woman's club the discussion of social customs in Germany, following a delightful paper read by Mrs. Bayard Taylor, brought out from several speakers the opinion that in a country where the soldier is so marked a figure in affairs the status of the woman is not apt to be prominent. She naturally suffers by a continual, if involuntary and scarcely recognized, comparison with the sturdy and stalwart warrior.

This leads on to the reflection that the time is going to come in the history of the world when the standing armies will be swept from the face of the earth, and that, too, perhaps, by the banding together of women. The peace associations of the world are by no means idle even now. At the last annual meeting of the Women's Peace association in Manchester a letter was read from a prominent English clergyman, in which he said: "Women have had a great deal to do with the admiration of military heroes. They can do much in changing popular sentiment about soldiers and soldiering." And he ends his letter with, "I hope that your association's efforts may be vigorous and effectual against that wicked and consequently stupid way of settling differences by murder which has so long afflicted the world." Those who believe that the world is not yet ready for universal peace none the less admit that it will come as the centuries roll on, not "through the fitness of one nation, but the fitness of many."— Her Point of View in New York Times.

College Girls and Marriag

The question of what becomes of the ollege girl is one of very considerable inportance, and with a view to throwing some light on it an examination has been made of the history of Vassar graduates.

The result is interesting if not decisive. Of the first 24 graduating classes at Vassar, embracing 667 members, 315 were reported as married, 305 as teachers, 28 as physicians, 39 as literary workers and the rest as artists, book-keepers and so forth—five of them being "farmers," and, let us hope, highly ures are not fully reliable, and that very nearly half of the Vassar graduates real-ly marry sooner or later. If no more than half makey there is certainly some-thing wrong with the curriculum. The world would become uninhabitable if only 50 per cent of the women in it mar-ried, leaving an equal percentage of mea unprovided for. It would not do at all. -St. Louis Republic.

The Woman's temple in Chicago gives the Woman's Christian Temperance union an important commercial stand-ing. The building cost $1,250,000, and the rentals now received amount to $170,-000, a large surplus over the expenses, it is claimed. The rent roll with all the offices filled will reach the considerable sum of $220,000 annually. If the women can fill this building, they will in a few years pay for the temple and have a fine of the organization.

Another success is the Woman's Temperance Publishing association of Chicago, of which Mrs. Matilda B. Carse is founder and president and Mrs. C. F. Grow manager. The association does an annual business of $125,000, doing a vast deal of book publishing for churches of In the first place, she must sleep with the fresh air pouring into her room as much as possible. Women In Iceland

The establishment at Reykjavik of a school for the higher education of girls is likely to be soon complete. A peculiar interest is found in the work from the fact that it indicates a total change in social aspects in that country, where the few existing educational institutions of a good order have been provided exclusively for men. The girls generally have had no other education than that acquired at home. They will be indebted in a certain degree to the World's fair for so unfair a course being interrupted, since this brought as the Icelandic delegate Mme. Sigridir Magnusson, who has been diligently at work for the school, proposing to devote to its benefit the proceeds from the sale of private property of her own in the form of a collection of northern antiquities.

The patrons of the school are his ma Hon. Emily Cathcart and others. A house has been built for this school on a piece of ground given to Mme. Magnus place where the little frown leaves its son for the purpose by her mother .-

Belts and Collars.

By her belt and her collar must you know her-this fin de siecle young woman of fashion.

To order of one's own modest couturiere a small belt and collar seems a simple affair, but only the victim knows the nathetic hopelessness of ever attaining just that bias, just that stretch, height or depth, which mark "artiste" on the gowns of the initiate.

Observe them well as you walk on the avenue, and see how insensibly you fall to judging the girl by her belt.

They become a fascinating study. Here an aristocratic belt, fitting to the svelte form as if to the manner born. There the nouveau riche. It came from the same establishment, but how uneasy and awry it seems! Then the "would-be-butcan'ts." They send a shiver down your back. And then come the prim, the neat, the lazy or the wishy washy belts of the countless and commonplace army of the

The belt and collar of the present styles can only come from two sourcesthe maison de nouveautes of high degree or from one's own unerring taste and judgment.—Harper's Bazar.

Taxation Without Repre

Dr. Hemphill of the Calvary Presbyerian church, San Francisco, lately gave a Sunday evening lecture on "Woman's Rights and Wrongs," in which he de-clared his unqualified support of wom-an's right to vote. He called attention to the different standards of education for the two sexes; the fact that only within the present generation women were permitted to enter the professions; to the different standard of wages, where women who do the same work as men as well or sometimes better are paid 25 per cent less; to the different standard of taxation, where women who are property holders are compelled to pay in the me ratio as men, and are yet denied the right of franchise. The action of our forefathers in emp-tying the British tea into Boston harbor was mentioned in connection with the injustice of taxation without representation, and the speaker said that "if taxation of men under these circumstances is tyranny, taxation of women under similar conditions is downright infamy."

The great age to which women re-ormers in general have lived is remarkable. The ages of Lucy Stone, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony and Mary A. Livermore are much beyond the ordinary life period. At death Abby Kelley Foster was 76 years old; Jane Gray Swisshelm, 69; Lydia Maria Child, 78; Lucretia Mott, 87, while Stephen S. Foster, the husband of Abby Kelley Fos-The main point is whether or not the college girl is less available for matrimony on account of her distinguished attainments. The statistics seem to indicate that she is. Only 36 per cent of marriages reported among graduates of Vassar is not a record of which that institution has reason to be proud. It is said by arrests, however, that there is a writer believes, is still alive, was still argar of some women's tea.

In a lecture at Milwankee on "Decoative and Applied Art," Mrs. Candac Wheeler, after explaining the art sense c' the word "original," as "a novelty which is not common," concluded by saying: "In all the ceramic art in America brought together at the World's fair, the only original thing came from Milwaukee. It was a gray stoneware jug, and it is worth 1 cent a pound in its nanufactured state, but the skill of the worker made it worth 1,000 cents a pound." Afterward, Mrs. Wheeler, as one of the committee of award, an-nounced that Miss Nellie Mears' "Genius of Wisconsin," which had stood in the Wisconsin state building, had wen the income with which to carry on the work | rize offered by the Woman's club for the most artistic production displayed at the World's fair by a Wisconsin woman.

The Overskirt Again.

The rejected overskirt is plainly on its way back to fashion's domain, and the day of easily constructed, lightweight end graceful skirts is on the wane. The Russian blouse began it, and the ruffles and folds disposed midway of the skirt hastened the inevitable day. Now a prominent fashion paper boldly publishes the picture of a jaunty young percon in a "velvet gown, with overskirt." The beholder is not favored with a rear view of the rejuvenated superfluity, but the front is slightly draped and is longer in the middle than at the sides. It reaches to within a few inches of the bottom of the skirt.-New York Tele-

Woman Poor Law Guardians.

The number of woman poor law guardians in England increases rapidly. In 1381 there were woman guardians in three of the metropolitan unions. In the present year 171 women have been elected in 101 different unions. Although candidates have not infrequently been rejected in the first instance, it is a significant fact that, once elected, these woman guardians are for the most elected again and again, so that while 39 of the 171 were elected this year for the first time and mostly in new places all the others were re-elections, many for seventh, eighth and up to twelfth and thirteenth times.—London Graphic.

She Excites Japan.

The fact that the Japanese government has granted to Dr. Mary A. Suganuma permission to practice as a physi cian in Nagasaki, in that empire, has aroused much interest in native and other circles. Dr. Suganuma is an American woman who was graduated from a medical college in Ohio, who became a Japanese subject, however, on her marriage with Mr. Suganuma, a government official in Osaki. Dr. Suganuma is the first woman physician permitted to practice her profession in Japan.-Exchange.

She turned her house into a hospital and with her family served as attendants, allowed the officials to use her parlor for business meetings and refused to accept money compensation for what she considered simple Christian charity. -Fort Wayne Dispatch.

She Is a Professor at Law.

The post of professor at law in the girls' colleges in Paris has been held since Jan. 1, 1893, by Mlle. Jeanne Chauvin, who is the first French doctress of law. The instruction her pupils get from her is wholly oral, as professors are forbidden by a special order of the vice rector of the Academy of Paris to put copies of the code itself into the hands of their woman pupils. - American Woman's Journal.

Women were elected to the position of county school superintendent in several counties of the state at the late election. Among the number are Miss Mina Wheeler in Crittenden, Mrs. A. T. Million in Madison, Miss Lucy Pattie in Franklin and Miss Katie McDaniel in Christian. There will be a host of female candidates for this position when the next election comes.-Owensboro Prefers Domestic Service. Elizabeth Banks, once private secretary to the British minister to Peru, will publish in a London daily a series of articles concerning her experiences as a parlor maid and housemaid in English families. The title will be, "In Caps and Aprons." She recommends domestic service to poor girls in preference to shop work.

An English dressmaker who was fined $40 for overworking her assistants admitted that two girls in her employment began work at 8:30 on Tuesday morning and worked continuously until 6:30 on Wednesday night—34 hours—with an hour and a half for rest.
